(Continued from Page 1) modest increases should be more than sufficient. Joe M. Doss, another airport commissioner, said the new rates might "deter airport development" and "out-price" the municipal airport in the competition for airport-oriented businesses. Mayor Albert Isen countered that the city would have customers "standing in line" to lease airport property once the Meadow Park urban renewal project is completed. Lawrence P. Irwin, deputy executive director of the Redevelopment Agency, added that he already has 43 "hot prospects" considering business sites near the Torrance airport.

COUNCILMEN also okayed a variance to permit the operation of a golf course at the city's southerly boundary, east of Delos Drive. Most of the land designated for the golf course lies within the city of Rolling Hill's "states. The Torrance finance department has determined that outright purchase of the land and the operation of the golf course by the city appears economically feasible with little or no contribution from

Fees for Parade Not Paid

Plans for a massive anti-war demonstration here Sunday are being made by South Bay Vietnam Summer, although no permit for the parade had been issued early today. James Moss, license supervisor for the city, said no permit would be issued until the group pays a $500 license fee imposed by the city's License Review Board. The parade, which some 5,000 persons are expected to join, is scheduled down Torrance Boulevard beginning at 10 a.m. Sunday. A rally will be held at the Civic Center following the march. Sponsors include the Peace Action Council, the Centinela-South Harbor Strike for Peace, and the Student Mobilization Committee.

the city's general fund. Within 25 to 30 years, the city will have full title to the land, at which time it may need to use the parcel for some other purpose, such as the construction of civic buildings.

Shooting Victim Critical

Gunfire woke up a sleepy Torrance neighborhood early Saturday morning. A bitter argument involving three men ended when Ellis Hurn of 2918 Opal St., fired one shot through his front door, hitting Donald Charles Watson in the throat.

Watson is in critical condition at the intensive care unit of Harbor General Hospital. Police said the altercation began when Watson and a friend, Ronnie L. Jackson, telephoned Hurn, threatening his life and challenging him to a fight.

Hurn called police but the two men arrived before police units. Watson and Jackson began pounding and kicking on the front door, police said. Hurn told investigating officers that he became alarmed and fired his .32-caliber revolver through the door. Jackson took Watson to Harbor General Hospital after the shooting.

Council action two weeks ago cleared the way to resume acquisition of property with federal funds, although no demolition will take place in the 54-acre area until all legal issues have been resolved.
